Australia’s largest companies are paying lip service to climate risk, but failing to demonstrate strategic responses. In 2018, the IPCC made clear the scale and urgency of the low-carbon transition required to avoid the worst impacts of climate change. But the glaring lack of detail in Australian companies’ climate risk disclosures suggests they are unprepared for this transition.

Dear fellow shareholders, The 2018 financial year has been exceptionally difficult for the banking industry, and for Westpac. It has also been a disappointing year for our shareholders, both in terms of the reduction in our share price and the uncertainty that has been introduced as a result of various regulatory actions and the Royal Commission.
